A SILVER VICTORY.

The V. and T. Meets its Waterloo.

THE TAXPAYERS REPUDIATE THEIR PET ASSESSOR

A Probability That the Whole Ticket Has Won.

Yesterday was a clear, pleasant day, in fact an ideal day for an election. The fight opened in the usual way with betting and bluster, and early in the morning the campaign war began his work.

The first thing that confronted the people, was a placard posted on the dead walls, containing a confusing mass of figures, preparatory to show that the Republicans had run the county about $30,000 cheaper during the last two years of their administration than had the Silver men.

When the intelligent voters saw that they had credited to the Republican party, savings belonging to the Silver party, there was a general laugh over town, and the thing fell flat.

The next, and a more bold canard, was a circular signed by Tremor Coffin and Allen Bragg to the effect that the S. P. R. R. had posted on their bulletin boards at Wadsworth, orders from the company to vote the Silver ticket. The absurdity of a corporation did and skilled in politics, making such an ass of itself, as to post political orders on a bulletin board, was apparent to the dullest intellect, yet a good many were humbugged by it. The chairman of the Silver Committee telegraphed at once to Wadsworth, and a dispatch was received from there that the story was absolutely false. Then the cry went along the street that the R. R. company were fighting the Silver ticket, swapping everything for Newlands. These reports, absolute canards and lies of the first water were circulated industriously all day and caused a good many votes for Doughty. The same grave stories were also told against the county Silver ticket.

There was a lively scene on the platform in the morning between Deal and Coffin. The latter had written letters to Douglas county stating that Newlands had ordered him to beg water suits against the Douglas ranchers after election. This, while an absolute lie, did Newlands considerable damage. Coffin was several days ago charged with the act but denied it. Deal went to Genoa and got absolute proof of Coffin's lying, and when he met him on the platform of the depot, gave him a dressing down in the presence of the crowd that made Coffin's cheek's burn. He publicly denounced him as a liar and Coffin took it as meek as Moses. By noon the Republicans had full sway. They were dumping money like water on the street and offering 4 to 1 that the Silver men would elect a man on the ticket, and the disposition to take the bets were not very lively. In the afternoon the Republican were certain that Kersey was all right and were wiping the noses of Silver men with ten dollar bills for an hour. Finally a report got along the street that Newlands was making a fight for himself a one and not for the ticket. It was a roorback started by the Republicans, but it cut into Newlands' vote and the fact that the V. & T. was for him also injured him materially and the tommyhawks of the Doughty men out and on the swings slashing Newlands.

The faces of the Silver men were very grim and they faced the rain of Republican money but they stood by their guns and worked, so that when the polls closed they felt that they had neglected nothing. For an hour or so there was a dreary look at the Silver headquarters, but before 9 o'clock the head of the ticket had been counted and it faced up considerably. Cleveland and Jones were about a stand off, and the boast that the V. and T. would pull him out of Ormsby with 100 majority had not materialized. It gave the Silver men hope. They then figured that the Doughty vote had been Silver in the county ticket, and things looked brighter. Then the counters in going hastily over the ballots found that the Republicans had scratched

Kersey in good shape, and news came of his fine majority in Empire.

The Silver men then figured a little and began betting even money on Kersey with no takers and finally shook money in their faces with three to one offers. By midnight the Silver men were jubilant, and it looked like a clean Silver sweep.

Schneider was running like a scared wolf. Logan was leading Mills and Kersey had gone to bed beaten out of his boots by Kinney. This was a bitter pill to the V. & T., for they had stacked their shekels on his election, and backed him with money and influence, but their over anxiety to elect him ruined his chances. He went down like a bullock hit with a mallet.

By 11 o'clock only a faint glimmer was seen at Republican headquarters, and the Committee kept the shady side of the street. Dr. Lee didn't lose his nerve and joked on the Republican defeat, but Coffin was sick all over and bleeding inwardly over the way the voters had jumped on the G. O. P. corpse in the Republican stronghold.

When the Republicans declined to meet the Silver men at the Opera House in a debate on the county finances, they virtually threw up the county fight.

The candidates backed by the V. & T. were snowed under the heaviest.

As the hours wore on the situation changed but little except to increase the lead of the Silverites, and the Republicans finally acknowledged defeat and disappeared from the counting places.

The count is very slow and will require until this P. M. to finish. As the APPEAL went to press the Silver men were constantly gaining and claiming the whole ticket.

Worsted in Debate

The county candidates on the silver ticket were billed to speak at the Opera House last night but for some unaccountable reason they did not materialize, and with their usual unrelaxableness, they charged the failure to the Republicans.—Tribune

The Silver men were badly worsted in the debate. They were stuck for the half rent.

The Australian ballot is death to the men who claim to be able to handle large blocks of franchise.
